NEW JAIL PROPOSED

What Officials Think of the One Now in Use.

Wholly fundequate to Meet the Demands Made Upon It-A Bemedy -Supported by Others.

Just at the present time the attenefficient force, for what the jall and station are is not their fault, but rathsince outgrown their usefulness and fitness, the frequent surprise of visitors is expressed that with the facilities existing such good order and health are preserved.

Knowing this and feeling that an expression of the public leaders would have weight with the public and its servants in office, a reporter of the Virginian-Pilot called upon

MR. GEO, H. DAWES and solicited his views on the subject. Mr. Dawes expressed himself as fol-

Air. Dawes expensions:
I have had this matter on my mind for a long time. The jail is at present unfit, unsuited and far too small to fill the needs of the city. It is an antiquated affair, built many years ago, and the city, having grown targely many then but antigrown this structhunated affair, built many years ago, and the city, having grown largely since then, has ourgrown this structure's proportions.

"I don't believe in makeshift arrangements of any sort. Addition to the present city jail will not fill the bill at all, in my opinion. What we need, I think, is a city prison separate entirely from the jail and police station, and such a building as will supply all the needs of a prison, looking forward for a period of twenty-live years to came, when the population will be very largely increased.

consider the accommodations for mers at the police station as alto-ice unsuitable. Some objection at be taked to a location for such a ding as I suggest: the city, how-, owns the property where the matory now stands, which will it eventually on Princes Anne me extended, and which, I think, ld suit the purpose both as course.

"I would also suggest the establish-ment of a workhouse and reformatory in connection with the new city pris-on, so that the different classes of criminals could be separated, as they should be."

MAYOR JOHNSTON.

MAYOR JOHNSTON,

Mayor C. Broks Johnston was seen in his office and was very ready and willing to talk, as the subject was one in which he was evidently deeply interseted. Said the Mayor:

"I should say we do need one of the newest and most modern and up-todate jails, and need it bailly.

"Not only do we need a jail, but we also read a madern and cultarged po-

Save that occupied by the livery gla-bles, is owned at present by the cly. This, I think, is large enough on which to erect the jail, and I would advocate having the Police Court, police head-quarters, patrol department, reading rooms and gymnasium under as well as the rooms for the midnight relief, at present domiciled over the Police Court.

"I would have the jail fitted with all modern arrangements, with baths, where each prisoner ou entering should be obliged to be washed and cleaned. I would then have them don a prison uniform, the property of the city, which they should wear during their term of they should wear during their term of they should wear during the jail they should wear during their term of imprisonment, thus keeping the jail tree from disease and vermin, a thing now impossible. Their clothing should be cleaned and disinfected and given them when they are liberated. I would mave each one also examined by a physician on entering the jail, thus further preventing the introduction of disease.

Further, I would favor having the Jall yard large enough to permit THE PILING OF AN AMOUNT OF STONE AND PIG IRON, TO GIVE HARD LABOR TO PRISONERS INCARCE-RATED, WITHOUT PUTTING THEM AT WORK THAT WOULD COMPETE WITH HONEST LABOR.

POLICE HEADQUARTERS

are completely outgrown, and I would have room made for the growing needs of the force. The men should have lockers for their rubbers, coats and belts and other equipments. They should have some comforts and benefits, and if necessary the whole square should be utilized, and the money allowed by the State should be used to improve the conditions of all.

"The jall, as it is now, is unfit for anybody to be confined in, and the city should act promptly in the matter and erect a new and fitting one, such as will serve the city's needs for years to come."

CITY SERGEANT LAWLER.

In this connection City Sergeant J. F. Lawler was seen, and consented to give his views, which follow:
"To begin with, this jall was built over fifty years ago, when Norfolk had but ten to twelve thousand inhabitants, and now Norfolk has about 70.000 m. Norfolk has about 70.000 m.

Clearing Out Sale of Shore,

In these times, when money is tight and wages small, every buyer should wisely seek and find where he can get needful articles of wear at the very lowest prices. Nothing is more essential to health than a neat and substantial shoe. An opportunity will be afforded every man, woman and child to-morrow to fit himself or herself with any article in the shoe line at half its real value. This offer is made by the Hofheimers' Shoe House, on Main street. This well-known firm has for several years inaugurated an annual clearing-out sale, which has proved a benefaction to the trade in this city and section. The stock offered is not goods made to sell cheap, but Hofheimer's new and reliable shoes, in good style and quality, all marked down in plain figures that will astomish and convince the most incredulous. This privilege to obtain unheard-of bargains is offered to the people of Norfolk and Portsmouth and the surany article in the shoe line at half its bargains is offered to the people of Norfolk and Portsmouth and the sur-rounding country, and the past well-filled promises of the Messrs, Hofhelm-er is a guarantee of good faith in the offer now made maying for the suggested improvements.

"The city must shortly improve the present jail or build a new one, and it am opposed to doing any more in the line of improving the old property. As THERE IS NOT THIS NEEDED for now being in use; and, further, by purchasing a new lot the present jail could be used until the new one is ready for occupancy, and then the old buildings could be put to the many uses so greatly needed. For instance, an emergency hospital, modern more in use, enlarged police headquarters, and small engine-house, with police parties the famous Seven Wise Men of Persian buildings could be put to the many wise maxims and principles of these celebrated men as a basis to erect its table and offlice, and a reformatory for youths could be arranged.

"More room is needed to further the plan of keeping the different classes of prisoners separate. I have, so far as able, with the present existing condition of things, kept three separate and clistinct classes of prisoners apart in this jail—youths, women and menbut the crowded condition has often made this difficult.

"This matter is greatly in need of agitation, and I hope your good paper will keep it before the public, until it is an accomplished fact and the new jail is secured."

SEATS IN A CAVERN.

It is recorded in ancient history that in a subterranean cavern, beneath the royal palace at Ispahan, the seat of the Persian Dynasty was the only spot where it was lawful to impart the most occult mysteries of the Seven, and to which the heir on the throne was admitted for merit and not of right.

In A. D. 638 Yezdefird was conquered by Mohammest, then styled as the "Camel Driver of Mecca," and with his downfall perished the influence of the Seven Wise Men of Persia. They, how. ever, left the impress of their philosophy and wisdem upon the history of that country, running through a succession of centuries, rendering their kingdom glorious and its aubjects happy by their devotion to Justice and the inculcation of "Wisdom.
